“ We come into this world with nothing, and it is certain that we will take nothing with us when we leave. Therefore, every loved one that we have in this life will be separated from us at some point. But for those who believe in God there is solace in the fact that as sorrowful as the parting was, so joyful shall be the reunion.

Someday, in a land beyond time and space, our hands shall touch again. We will walk side by side down a broad avenue paved with gold as clear as glass. We will walk past a gate made of a single pearl, and stand beside a bejeweled wall. There I will look at her and see the bright smile and the twinkling eyes that I remember from my youth. Bathed in the warm glow of the light that shines forth from the face of him who lives forever and ever; and every sorrow that ever I had shall flee away.

So how can I be sad on this day? Indeed, I have more joy within me today than any three people could muster.

My love, whom I have cared for all these years, is finally safe from all harm and suffering, protected by the father who loves her more than anyone else ever could. I have a great sense of relief and comfort, knowing that her race is run, and this rest and peace, which so eluded her in life, is hers to keep.

Anita was one of my best friends in high school. I spent a lot of time at her home, shared many meals with her family and we attended church together. The two of us went on a road trip to Victoria BC. She was a lot of fun, we laughed and sang, Anita had a beautiful voice. My husband and I met at Tom and Anita's wedding! It doesn't get much better than that, thank you both. Anita, I'm looking forward to seeing you again in Heaven with our Lord and Savior.
