“ I was deeply saddened to hear of Colonel Banks passing. I met him for the first time about 10 years ago. I had known from his signature on my Air Force awards that he had been my commanding officer at Amarillo AFB in the early 60's. While I was doing genealogical research and going through family memorabilia I found a cryptic telegram that was addressed to him during the war. It showed he lived in Corvallis, right on my doorstep, so I contacted him. He graciously opened his door to a perfect stranger and shared his memories, and to me priceless knowledge of a mission he flew during which my uncle, Arnold Churchek and the rest of the crew of the "Black Widow" was lost. I last saw him in Beaverton just a couple of months ago. We looked through my copy of The Flying Circus, which tells the history of the 380th Bomb Group and the men and women who served and sacrificed. After all those years, while he looked at the photos you could see alternately smiles, and tears in his eyes as he remembered those that he loved and lost. Since his passing I had the opportunity to go through "Witchcraft", the restored B-24 operated by the Collings Foundation and Greg Trebon the pilot, gave me a detailed account of what life on a combat mission in a B-24 would be like. The image I constructed in my mind was not a pleasant one. We all owe a great debt to Colonel Banks and his entire generation for fighting and dying to secure the wonderful life we have today. He was a true hero, and a gentleman to the end. I am honored and grateful for having the opportunity to know him. Arnold W. Churchek

“ my name is Mary Lou Keim. I am the daughter of Richard S. Fern, Sr. Colonel Banks was the Commander of my dad's B-24, Miss Giving. Dad was a waist gunner. he always spoke very highly of Colonel Banks and had so many great tales. today is June 13th. i woke up this morning at 0500 with Colonel Banks on my mind. I though i should write to him, and thank him for taking such good care of my Dad in the war, so that i and my brothers and sister could be born. I was so sorry to look him up online, (and he appears in many places) and find that he passed away June 3rd. I am sure you all loved Colonel Banks very much, and to me, he is an American Hero. I hope he heard my thoughts this morning. God bless you all.
