“ Fleming was part of our extended family and friends in Redmond, Halfway and Nampa. Climbed Eagle Cap, river rafting, and more. He was with us for two weddings. We have several of his ducks, a swan and a blackbird. Quite a character. Always interesting and fun. He is and will be missed.

“ One caregiver said Jim Fleming was very much his own man. I knew him and his mother forty years ago and then bonded with him at an assisted living over our own broken backs. He wanted to drive his car as long as he was able and would sometimes go out and just sit in it. One time at his house there was devilment in his eyes as he mowed his lawn on a riding mower because he was so eager to do it and still could. He hand-carved over 200 Birds, mostly ducks, and was fantastic to go birdwatching with. He never acknowledged that he was as smart as he was. I heard from a mutual friend that after students in his auto mechanics class got a motorcycle repaired he rode the bike down the hall to the principal's office just to show her they could do it. His twinkly eyes revealed an upbeat spirit and droll sense of humor. I'm mighty glad I knew him and miss him very much today....

“ I only met Jim 3 yrs ago and we hit it off immediately. Our interest in cars was the start and quickly we found mutual grounds of agreement and disagreement that led to a lot of good moments and laughter. We exchanged books, his more of interest than mine in most cases and he was always honest in his reviews. One rare thing about our too brief friendship was trading stories of our time in the army which not quite overlapped each other. You could say we were in the army together at different times in different places. It's a rare thing now to be able to speak of those days with another who knows exactly what you're saying. I'm forever grateful to have known him.
