“ Leon - you took on and handled the unjust unfairness handed you with dignity and aplomb that transcended the nonsense of those coming at you. From what I know and learned about you and what your friends and family know of you, you have never been measured by that injustice but by the class and character shown when dealing with facing those challenges. Journey well, sir. With respect. Brian Cox

“ Uncle...guess what?? The sun rose the next day and set! I know I am asking myself how and the hell did the world continue on when one of the greatest souls on the planet has left us on this earthly plane???. Its been almost a month now and you know what I am still asking how the world is still spinning without you here!! I miss you Uncle more than can be express be humanly words. I know you are looking down with all of our loved ones up there. I know your smiling cause you finally got your justice for all that life handed you. I am thankful that the last thing I said to you and always said to you was that I loved you!

No time does not heal pain time just helps you deal with how you handle pain. The pain of losing you is like losing Grandma and Coral all over again. Always till we meet again...I love you

“ *In loving memory of Leon Erwin Wendt,
We send you thoughts of peace and courage. You are the strongest man I know & I cherish the time we spent with you Uncle. Your visits when I was a kid will never be forgotten. You are everything an Uncle could and should be in life. A smile and presents in hand you always knew how to make things seem so simple in life.
Thank you for changing my life the last visit I got to see you. SO many years ago, yet just like yesterday.. You would be proud of the woman I am, the son we raised & most of all that wild husband I got under control. We made it all with your words of wisdom & my son followed in your footsteps, yes he is salty as hell just like you a Military man that will always be salty!
May you watch from above guiding us through this loss. When I hear the sea wave crashing on the beaches, I will always think of you! Hug my Grandparents and watch over my Dad, your big brother he misses you so!
Love you Misty & Family*
