I met with Mary and her friends three mornings a week for coffee and conversation starting in 2013 until she retired from coming after Harold's death. Since then I've only sent her a little mail, a book I knew she'd like, etc. I missed her and so have her friends.

Some years ago I worked up a family tree for her on Ancestry.com going back to her immigrant ancestors and just a bit beyond into Sweden.

We both enjoyed that and I was able to find a few photos of relatives that she had not seen before, while she taught me about Sweden and growing up on the northern California coast. Her love of good books and sparkly personality are only two of the many things I'll remember about her sweet and gentle soul. I'll choose to think that she and Harold are together again, looking out on their beloved Mendocino landscape.
