

Raymond Lowell Alexy

June 29, 1938 - September 9, 2016

Raymond B. Alexy, age 78, died Friday, September 9, 2016 at his Lebanon home. Arrangements are pending. Please leave your thoughts and memories for the family at www.demossdurdan.com

Tribute Wall

BW

“ My mom lived across the street from Joanne and Ray on Washington St and Then we lived across the st from them on headgate road. We have so have good memories of ray but one has stuck in my head. He had these pair of orange shorts that he used too wear that my mom hated. She kept on telling him " ray i will get ahold of them one of these days and i will throw them away " Well gues what? Joanne kind of helped her out....Haha He was always there for our family. He was good friends with my grandpa and grandma Byrd. My daughter gre up calling him papa ray ray . We will be greatly missed.

Brenda Waltenberg - September 16, 2016 at 10:55 PM

“ My family and I live in the house across the street from Ray. We have truly been blessed to have gotten to know him and Joanne. He was always so sweet to my boys. Ray was so giving and such a great story teller. Ray and I would talk about doing yard work often. I mentioned one day I wanted a leaf blower/sucker. He mentioned he had 2 and was happy to let me use his second one. He would always joke with me and say " I know where you live" ha ha lol. I loved being in my front yard and seeing him outside on his mower and waving to him. He would always wave back and sometimes even drive over to my yard and visit with me. He was always full of stories! I loved hearing what he had to say , it never got boring! Out of all the stories he told me, my most favorite store was how he met Joanne. He told me he knew on that first blind date he had, he just knew she was "the one" when he told me that story he ended up tearing in tears. I could just see how much he loved her!! My family and I will truly miss him and his hospitality.

Stephanie Deckert - September 14, 2016 at 12:37 PM